Members of Richmond's Steel City Connection, a local group of Pittsburgh Steelers fans, raised $5,441 this year toward their commitment to name a unit secretary station in the Children's Tower.

This year's "Karate-a-thon" hosted by Grandmaster Dong's Martial Arts raised $90,286. The annual event encourages students and their families from all eight Grandmaster Dong's locations to challenge themselves through martial arts. Since 1996, the event has collected more than $767,000 for CHoR.

Four-year-old Remy Miller donated 12 inches of hair from her first haircut to make wigs for kids with cancer. Remy, who has spinal muscular atrophy and has been a CHoR patient most of her life, donated enough hair to make four wigs. Pictured with Remy is her dad, Brett.
